Mr. St. Clair, the President's lawyer, told newsmen that if the House Judiciary Committee issued a subpoena demanding 76 more Watergate tapes, which it has requested for its impeachment inquiry, the President would not comply. "Then we would have a confrontation," said Mr. St. Clair. But he added that be did

Judiciary Committee any more Watereste tapes or transcripts. but it had made no flat turndown as Mr. St. Clair did today. There had been some indication vesterday that an accommodation might be worked out over Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski's subpoens for 64 Watergate tapes. But Mr. St. Clair said today that Mr. Nixon has turned this down and instructed Mr. St. Clair to move forward with his motion to quash Mr. Jaworski's subpoena,

The reason for the President's decision to turn over no more Watergate materials, said Mr. St. Clair, is that "the President has made available to the public what he believes is the full Watergate story."

Many of the 76 tapes requested by the Judiciary Committee and the 64 subpoensed hy Mr. Jaworski are the same. They cover a period of about a year, starting on June 20, 1972, three days after the break-in et the Democratic National Committee's headquarters in the Watergate building complex.

WASHINGTON, May 7 (UPI). -The House today rejected a proposal to set up machinery for converting to the metric system of weights and measures over a

But he said he is "enormously distressed that there was not enough showing of moral indigna-tion" by White House figures in their taped discussions of the Watergate scandal. 'Suspension of Judgment'

In a later statement, he told the Senate, "I will not take a position supporting any action which involved any form of immorality or criminality as the transcripts indicate. At the same time, I call for a suspension of judgment. I hope that all of us will assume the presumption of imocence and that we will with-hold our judgment as to specific individuals, pending the opera-tion of our great constitutional system. It works, it always has, it will this time."

Despite his stress on withholding judgment on criminal culpability, his comments appear to represent a backing away from his earlier strong public defenses of the President, signaling the deepening gloom of GOP loyalists on Capitol Hill on the whole developing course of the Water-gate investigation and impeachment proceedings.

Sen. Scott's view was quickly endorsed by the House minority leader, Rep. John J. Rhodes of Arisons. "I wouldn't quarrel with it." he said Rep. Rhodes added that while he has act yet seen anything "definitely impeach-able" in the transcripts, "I can see some areas in here where; if you really wanted to do it, you could say this adds up to [an impeachable offense] but I haven't done it myself."

Engineering Workers Strike Against British Court Ruling

By Terry Robards

LONDON. May 7 (NYT),--A strike involving 12 million engineering workers threatened today to shut down a major part of British industry just as the nation's economy was recovering from the ravages of the three-day

The Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers ordered 2 uationwide stoppage this afternoon. Production was expected to halt in car plants, power stations, steel mills, fabricating shops, newspapers and other sectors of industry.

It was uncertain how quickly the strike would spread or now long it would last. The union's executive council ordered the stoppage immediately and said it would continue on a day-to-day basis until further notice.

London morning newspapers were unable to print Wednesday's editions, the Associated Press reported. The Times was the first national paper to amounce it was unable to print because of the strike. Others quickly followed.1

The central issue in the dispute is a ruling issued last September by the National Industriel Relations Court that an engineers' strike involving 26 men at a relatively small manufacturing plant in Woking, Surrey, about 26 miles from London, constituted an unfair labor practice.

Fine for Contempt Since then, the union has been ordered to pay a fine of £75,000 for contempt and later was orderen to pay £47,000 in compensation to the company. Con-Mech (Engineering) Ltd. The matter came to a head Friday when the court scized nearly all of the union's funds because of nonpayment of the levies. The dispute does not involve a direct challenge to the "social contract" between the administratioo of Prime Minister Harold Wilson and British labor because the government has already introduced legislation-supported by the trade unions-to repeal the Industrial Relations Act that created the court. Nevertheless, the strike will test the ability of the Wilson administration to maintain peaceful relations with the labor movement and to keep the economy on an even keel.

But the work, valued at 12 milich ($4,8 million), was showing signs of damp after being 10 weeks in the hands of unknown thieves since they smashed their way into the Kenwood House Gallery, Hampstead, on Feb. 22.

The painting, "The Guitar Player," is one of less than 30 works by the 17th-century Dutch master Jan Vermeer still in existence.

The curator of the Kenwood House Gallery, John Jacob, said: The painting is in quite good condition... It is beginning to show signs that it is suffering from damp."

The issues involved are how far Isrnel will withdraw to a new cease-fire line, creation of a buffer zone between the two forces, a thinning-out on both sides of the lino, and a role for the United Nations.

All the issues are dependent on each other, but the most explo-sive politically is where the cease-fire line shall be.

The American official said earlier that "reasonable progress" had been made in Mr. Kissinger's talks here with the Israelis in the last few days.

Reporting on the visit to Damascus of Mr. Gromyko, just before he went to Cyprus to meet Mr. Kissinger, Tass news agency said the Russians agreed with the Syrians that the disengagement of Syrian and Israeli troops must be regarded as a step on the way to the complete withdrawal of the Israeli troops from all the occupied Arab lands."

A government communique the Soviet Union'e full support for the Syrien attitude toward any troop disengagement on the for the presidency to succeed Mr. Heinemann on May 15, read the following letter from Mr. Brandt, dated May 6:

"Dear colleague, Mr. Scheel, "As you know, I have informed the President this evening that I am assuming political tand also personal: responsibility for negligence in connection with the Guillaume spy affair, and resigning from the office of chancellor.

"Meanwhile, I am Informed that the President has taken my resignation into account. I assume that the decisions necessary until the election of a new chancellor can be taken cere of tomorrow.

"Please be so good, dear colleague, to give the cabinet my heartfelt thanks for their cooperation and to give each of them my very best wishes.

Willy Brandt." Mr. Scheel then told the cabinet that the chancellor had made his resignation decision on Sun-day, according to the chief government spokesman Ruediger von Wechmar, "Attempts to dissuade hin: were, unfortunately, not successful," Mr. von Wechmar quoted the foreign minister as saving.

"The foreign minister deplored the fact that Willy Brandt had to end his career at the height of his powers because of an esplo-nage affair," Mr. von Wechmar

Experience in Office'

Later in the morning, Mr. Brandt met with Social Demo-cratic members of the Bundestag and told them. "My resignation is a result of my experience in office, my respect for the unwritten rules of democracy, and to prevent my personal and political integrity from being destroyed."

The deputies cheered and gave him a bunch of red roses

Egon Bahr, one of Mr. Brandt's closest advisers since his years in the late 1950s and early 1960s es mayor of West Berlin, was so moved that he wept.

For the time being, Mr. Brandt told the deputies, he would not resign from his position as head of the party, which faces a crucial state election in Lower Sexony on June 9. But close associates said they did not know what Mr. Brandt would do next, And he has still not given the public a detailed account of his reasons for resign-"I can't imagine that the chancellor would remain silent on this," Mr. Von Wechmar said at e press conference this afternoon. "I suppose he'd find a time and place for a complete explanation."

Mr. von Wechmar did not comment on reports in the conservative opposition press that Mr. Brandt was resigning because Guillaume had evidence of extramarital activities "I will not mess on or comment on rumors," he said. Another aide to Mr. Brandt had a stronger comment:

Architect of Ostpolitik

Mr. Brandt, the architect of the Osrpolitik that brought West German relations with the German Communist state to the east and with the Soviet Union and won for him the Nobel Peace Prize in 1971, was in the end the victim of a Communist agent from East Berlin. The government said after Guillaume'e arrest last month that he had been discovered in the summer of 1973 but allowed to remain in his position in the chancellery until he discovered he was being followed on the way back from a vacation on April 23. After the arrest, a round of mutual recrimination took place, with officials and aides of Mr. Brandt, accusing each other of "negligence" in ignoring suspiclons about Guilleume that dated from before he fled from East Germany to the West, posing as a refugee in 1956. Mr. Brandt put a stop to that with his assump-tion of responsibility for negli-gence in his letter of resignation last night. Whether Mr. Brandt's departure will mean a shift in Bonn's policy of relaxing tensions with the Communist governments to the east was a subject of concern today to Soviet and other Eastern European diplomats and journalists here.

New Foreign Minister

It seemed likely, in fact, that the cabinet that Mr. Schmidt is expected to name after his election next week would include a conservative Free Democrat. Interior Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher, as foreign minister.

And it is likely that the cahinet will not include the aldo behind the Ostpolitik, Mr. Bahr. Mr. Schmidt has, in many public speeches, made it clear that he supports a strong Western alliance. He would be expected to make a determined attempt to breathe new life into the stalled movement toward European politiesi and military unification, and a warming up of cooled rethe Common between Market and the United States.

Willy Brandt appears sad yesterday at a party meeting.

The Soviet press reported the resignation briefly, without any direct comment or any mention of the prospect that Mr. Brandt would be succeeded by Helmut Schmidt, the West German Finance Minister.

The widespread feeling among diplomats in Moscow, however, was that the resignation would be regarded by the Soviet Union as a major blow because the Brandt policy toward Eastern Europe was the key to Moscow's gaining formal acceptance in the West of the division of Europe and Germany.

Moscow has made no secret of its immense respect for Mr. Brandt and appreciation for his policies. The brief reports delay in Soviet comment on a major turn of events is not unusual-did not mention that he was brought down by the case of a Communist spy in his office.

The public comments, though limited, flowed much more freely in Western Europe, Max van der Stoel, the Dutch Foreign Minister, called the resignation "yet another blow to European unity.

"It is tragic that a man who has done so much to improve East-West relations should be brought down by an incident in-volving an East German spy," he

As a result of the Senate's action, the Defense Department will be held during the current fiscal year to a $1,126-billion ceiling on military sid to South Victnam, a limit imposed by Congress last year. The fiscal year will end June 30, and the Defense Department has virtually exhausted its spending authority under the congressionally imposed ceiling. As part of a supplementary weapons request for the Defense Department, the administration had asked Congress to raise the ceiling from $1.126 billion to $1.6

After the House refused, in an April 4 vote, to raise the celling the administration tried a different approach in the Senate.. It went along with a suggestion from the Senate Armed Services Committee for the change in accounting procedures.

With the concurrence of the Defense Department, the Senate committee concluded that the Pentagon had mistakenly applied $266 million in ammunition delivered in 1972, and 1973 against the ceiling for the current fiscal year. In its report on the legislation, therefore, the Senate com-mittee argued that the Defense Department could provide an additional $266 million in aid and still stay within the $1.126-billion

Sen Kennedy attacked the proposed accounting procedure as a "bookkeeper's sleight of hand" and said the administration was "perpetuating old relationships and policies" in Indochina. Leading the defense of the administration's case, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said the increased aid was "an obliga-tion to an ally" and "part of the process of winding down and get-ting out as fast as we reasonably

With the Kennedy amendment adopted, the Senate went on to pass legislation authorizing an additional $415 million for weap-ons procurement by the Defense Department in the current fiscal year. The Senate Armsd Services Committee had cut $842 million from the Pentagon's request, which had been presented as necessary for the replacing of arms sent to Israel for last fall's Middle Bast war.

The Senate dealt President Nixon another foreign-policy rebuff later yesterday. By a 43-29 vote, it tacked onto a $9.5-billion Strike in U.K.

The election took place at a time when most of British in-dustry had been put on a threeday work week to conserve fuel supplies. Although the short work week did not have the devastating ences that had been expected, it caused major losses in production and earnings across

One of Mr. Wilson's first acts after the elections was to call off the three-day week. A campaign pledge had been to repeal the Industrial Relations Act, thereby dissolving the National Industrial Relations Court, which had ruled repeatedly against the engineer-

In calling the strike today, the engineers rebuffed Michael Foot, the Employment Secretary, who had appealed to the union to take its case back to the court and avoid another legal confron-tation. The strike is thus being viewed at best as an embarrass-ment to the Labor government and at worst as a significant political setheck

During e debate in the House of Commons, the prime minister attempted to attribute the strike to the actions of the former Conservative government. "It is an extremely serious consequence," he said, "of the actions of the court over the last two or three days which has resulted even now, as the act is dying and putrefying, from Conservative leg-

They also say they have a chance at unseating Senators Bob Dole of Kansas and Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma. They would be happr. however, to score a net gain of two or three seats and they would be surprised to gain five. Eisenhower Era

Democrats are a little puzzled that their goals are not higher. Ouce they imagined that 1974 would be like 1958, the last midtenn election of the Eisenhower era, when they gained 13 seats in the Senate, 47 House seats and five governorships. Rising unemployment and the threat of recession hang over this year, as they did over 1958: this year, in addition, there is record inflation and Watergate.

But Democrats, like Republicans, have a curious problem— reluctant candidates. The Senate, "the most exclusive club in the world," appears not to be the attraction it once was. Governors Thomas Salmon of Vermoot and Mike O'Callaghan of Nevada, both Democrats, had the chance to run as strong favorites for open Senate seats, but decided to run for re-election instead.

In New Hampshire, the most formidable Democrats to succeed Sen, Norris Cotton, a retiring Republicao, are said to be William Dunfrey, a hotel executive, and Mayor Sylvio Dupuis of Man-chester. Both have resisted party pressures to run.

Republicans have the problem to an even greater degree. At least a dozen men who might have made impressive Senate candidates, had the Nixon administration and the Republican party been prospering, have oecided not to run.

Nixon Signs Bill Establishing U.S.

Energy Agency

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP),-President Nixon signed legislation creating the Federal Energy Administration today and warned of "disturbing indications that . . . many Americans believe that good ervation habits can be forsotten" with the casing of the energy crisis.

"By no stretch of the imagination have we yet overcome the energy challenge," Mr. Nixon said in a statement after he signed the bill. He also asked for prompt congressional passage of other administration-sponsored energy measures.

The new, independent agency created by the legislation will coordinate federal policy and actions in coping with energy shortages. It replaces the Federal Energy Office, which Mr. Nixon established by executive order last winter.

John Sawhill, who has been assistant FEO director, will take over tomorrow as head of the new agency when William Simon is sworn in as Treasury Secretary. No Awards in Drama, Fiction

BEIRUT, May 7 (WP).-The sudden end of 16 years of Gaul-list rule in France can only dismay Arab governments, which have looked on the Gaullists as their strongest allies in Western Europe.

There is already unconcealed apprehension in the Arab world that the defeat of Jacques Chaban-Delmas in Sunday's first round of voting in France could affect the close French-Arab Beirut's influential newspaper Al Anwar, which often echoes the viewpoint of President Anwar Sadat's government in Egypt, signaled this concern yesterday by asserting that "American policy and Zionist fingers were not entirely innocent of bringing about the downfall of Gaullism."

Arab sympathies about France's runoff election on May 19 are already clear. While worried that Finance Minister Valery Gis-card d'Estaing might not be as friendly as Presidents Charles de Gaulle and Georges Pompidou were, Arab politicians and intellectuals are convinced that the election of Socialist François Mitterrand would be a disaster for

This feeling is especially acute in Cairo. The French Socialist candidate visited the Egyptian capital earlier this year for a three-day seminar at the newssper Al Ahram and sharp debate with the Egyptian officials and newsmen present,

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing in the runoff, which, according to some commentators and projections, could be decided by less than a 1 percent margin.

An analysis of Sunday's voting indicates that Mr. Giscard d'Estaing may narrowly beat Mr. Mitterrand, although the Socialist candidate, with Communist support, received 43.24 percent of the vote against Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's 32.6 percent in the first balloting. The defection of even a small fraction of the conservative vote could give Mr.

Mitterrand the victory. Mr. Royer is regarded as the champion of France's small shopkeepers and artisans. Although Mr. Royer warned that Mr. Mitterrand's victory would turn France into a "bureaucratic, totalitarian state," it appears possible that a stable number of his supporters may be so hostile to Mr. Giscard iEstaing, the man in charge of the tax system through most of the last 11 years of Gaullist rule, that they may ignore Mr. Royer's

Whoever wins on May 19, the election will mark the end of the Gaullist era, which began when an uprising of French settlers in Algeria carried the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle to power in May, 1958. The official Gaullist candidate, Jacques Chaban-T-'mas, ran a poor third Sunday, with 15.10 percent of the vote, and was also eliminated. There was bitter recrim'- Lon within the Gaullist party over the defeat, many staunch Gaullists blaming Frime Minister Pietre Messmer for his lukewarm support of Mr. Chaban-Delmas. Mr. Messmer and the Gaullist leadership have called on their supporters to vote for Mr. Giscard d'Estaing in the runoff.

Statesman of Integrity

For Americans, there is a special sting in the resignation of Willy Brandt, quite apart from the fact that, as chancellor of West Germany, Mr. Brandt was a friend of the United States as well as a force for progress in Western Europe. Mr. Brandt not only accepted political responsibility for the appointment of an East German spy to a government post-as President Nixon acknowledged his general responsibility for the acts of his agents in Watergate—he gave up his

It will not do to press the analogy too closely-there are marked differences, constitutionally, in terms of political stresses and in personal temperament, between the President of the United States and the former West German chancellor Moreover. the effects of Mr. Brandt's departure from office, both on his country's government and on international affairs, suggests that even an act of personal integrity can have very zerious consequences.

Willy Brandt accomplished much for Europe in Bonn. And while it is much too early to rule him out of future political and diplomatic developments, or to predict just what impact his resignation will have on that future, there is now uncertainty about the course of one of the most stable and prosperous countries in the world. With Britain and Italy in economic trouble, and France's leadership still undecided, this makes for deep uneasiness about the Common Market, both within itself and in Its relations to other countries.

This last is particularly aerious insofar as the attitude of Western Europe toward the superpowers is concerned. Mr. Brandt was not only a friend of America, but had made great progress in establishing fruitful contacts between Bonn and Eastern Europe. Many West Germans were troubled by the Brandt Ostpolitik, and the circumstances of the chancellor's resignation—a case of East German esplonage - may intensify the discontent. How this will affect detente. in the European capitals as well as in Washington and Moscow, remains to he seen.

Nevertheless, admitting the patent fact that Mr. Brandt's act in stepping down leaves many problems in its wake, and also recognizing that a political oblituary for him would be premature, it is due to him to state that his last act as chancellor was consistent with the courage and integrity that has marked his whole career. From his youthful opposition to Nazism through the toughness that marked his leadership in heleaguered West Berlin to that policy toward the East that won him the Nobel Peace Prize, he has been a good German, a good European and a good statesman to

Decline of the Common Market

Italy's abrupt decision to limit imports is the latest in a portentous series of rehuffs to the central principle of the European Common Market. In March there was the British demand to renegotiate its terms of entering the market. In January, there was the sudden French decision to float the franc. In December there were the stalemate over regional development funds and the market's demonstrated inability to work out a joint policy on oil. Western Europe is now being shaken by the same menacing inflation as the United States, and it has the same fears of future unemployment. Each of the Western European governments is under great pressure to act decisively to protect its people's prosperity. Since they cannot agree to move together, they are now moving separately. Italy's curtallment of imports is not a final vote of no confidence in the Common Market. But it is certainly a vote of not enough confidence.

Italy's government was quite correct in concluding that, if it was to do anything at all, it had to act much more rapidly than the Common Market's consultation processes allow. The Italian economy is obviously in a precarious state of health. Things were going well enough last fall, although the combination of prosperity and inflation was resulting in a boom in imported consumers' goods. But when the oil prices shot up at the end of the year, the inflation and the deficit in the trade balance suddenly got very much worse.

Italy's rate of inflation is now approaching 20 percent. Inflation rates of 15 percent a year or more are now general throughout the major countries of Western Europe, with the single monumental exception of West Germany. That is why all of the other major European currencies are now declining in comparison with the deutsche mark. In nervous times, well-to-do Italians have a tendency to run their money across the border into Switzerland, which lies in the deutsche mark bloc. That outflow drains Italy, in turn, of the money needed at home for investment. To stop this drain, the Italian government decided that it had no choice but to demonstrate, in the most forceful way possible, that it is capable of curhing imports and protecting the value of the

A profound change of perspective among Europeans is becoming manifest. Europeans are losing falth in the idea of Europe, and in the Common Market as an institution capable of actually running things. The market was never built on purely technical economic incentives or a narrowly arithmetical calculation of benefits. It was the creation of the postwar years, when the sense of danger and shared destiny was very strong. Now Europe has enjoyed a generation of serenity and rapidly rising wealth. Ironically, it seems to have left the Common Market without a polltical hase among the 259 million people who are its constituents. Unfortunately the alternative, reliance on the present array of weak national governments, does not seem to offer much reassurance amid a soaring inflation and harsh competition for resources.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Détente and Trade

peal, not long before his death, for a more enlightened Communist society in which police measures against intellectuals would be barred raises the question again of what, If anything, the United States can do to advance this evolution.

"It is essential that people enjoy their inalienable rights here in the Soviet Union." Mr. Khrushchev sald in his tape-recorded memoirs. "It was for those rights that 10 million or more of our citizens paid with their lives in Stalin's jails and camps."

One view in the United States is that Soviet liberalization and freer emigration can be advanced by withholding American trade and credits. That view is embodied in the Jackson amendment to the trade hill, which has been endorsed by such Soviet dissidents as nuclear physicist Andrei Sakharov.

The contrary view has just been reiterated by Mr. Sakharov's old friend and fellow dissident, the bistorian Roy Medvedev, who believes that trade expansion and continued detente are more likely to nurture freedom in Soviet society, including freer emigration. Denial of trade and other Western pressures beyond "a certain limit" might boomerang. he argues, and lead to a tightening of Soviet police controls.

The Medvedev view appears to us to be the quiet diplomacy should not be employed to press for freer emigration and changes in Soviet foreign, defense and domestic policies

Former Soviet Premier Khrushchev's ap- which endanger detente. Of course it should; but there are severe limits to what can be achieved.

The Soviet need for American trade and credits is declining, reducing the leverage the United States can exert on Soviet policles. As a major exporter of raw materials, including petroleum, the Soviet Union has gained from the fourfold rise in oil prices last year. Increased earoings from oil enports alone promise to cover generously this year the Soviet Union's hard currency bai ance-of-payments deficit, which amounted to $1.3 billion in 1972. That is the conclusion of a study by Prof. Marshall Goldman. of Wellesley College, once a fire supporter of Sen. Jackson's demands, who now argues that Congress can no longer be unreasonable in the concessions asked of the Russians in exchange for trade and credits

"The Russians might well agree to maintain emigration rates for Soviet Jews at the levels that prevailed in 1973 and might also concede to stop harassment, but it is unrealistic to expect concessions that might have been made a year ago," he told the Senate Banking Committee.

The Goldman study suggests that the Jackson amendment, if it ever had any value, has become a dwindling arse: Free world trade liberalization is being held up without gaining Soviet concessions. Tree more realistic one. This does not mean that | Congress would be better adviced to permit reasonable trade and modest steditz to go forward in the interests of detente.

Cuba: Live Issue in U.S. Again

By David Binder

WASHINGTON.—Americans influential in the national policy-making process have begun to debate the issue of relations with Cuba after a lapse of more than five years.

Although leading officials of the Nixon administration insist that no change is imminent in the U.S. policy of boycott toward the island, some officials comment that the mere emergence of the debate signifles an important change, whose end point-while still a loog stretch down the road—could be the resumption of

On the surface, the new debate has been sparked by two admin-Istration decisions favorable to mich were a the State Department April 13.

New Dialogue

The first was to license American subsidiaries of three major motor vehicle companies in Argenting to export cars and trucks to Cuba. The second was Secretary of State Kissinger's acquiescence to demands of Latin American and Carlobean foreign ministers to a vote among the members of the Organization of American States to determine whether Cuba should be invited to participate in the next round of the "new hemisphere dialogue" inaugurated by the administration last year.

The debate has received an added fillip from a request by members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and four congressmen for a "new look" at the U.S. policy toward Cuba.

However, administration officials say the real impetus for the debate comes from the U.S. decision to cultivate Latin American and Caribbean neighbors, following five years of neglect. This has automatically revived the question of Cuba-so near geographically to the United States and so far away in terms of political orientation since the Bay of Pigs disaster and Soviet missile crisis of the early 1960s.

The issue has also drawn attention because five years of adminextration détente policy-involving principally the Soviet Union and China-have leit only Cuba, Albaola and Hongolla on the fringes Again, Cuba attracts more interest recause of proximity to the United

Recently President Nimo and Secretary Kisslager have been er icized-by Argentina, for instance-or, the premise that the United States has sacrificed a constructive policy toward Latin America as a whole to its rigid ance ou Choa.

Stance Softened

Mr. Kissinger has told his aides the nelicees just the reverse is true. that the administration is so current about developing constructive relations with Latin America that it does not want the Cuba issue to impede "the new hemisphere dialogue." this reason, he softened the U.S. stance on those aspects of Cuban policy affecting other Latin American countries.

But he is strictly limiting further movement toward an eventual understunding with Cuba in the belief this would better suit the development of consensus in the hemisphere on the Cuban questlon.

As assessed by Mr. Elssinger and his specialists, there are large obstacles to be overcome before Washington and Hayana could begin a direct dialogue on improving relations. These include the following:

· Premier Castro's seemingly implacable hostility toward the United States, perticularly toward the Nixon administration. Although Washington believes the Castro leadership is no longer fomenting revolution in Latin America on a grand scale, Havana remains an "enemy" in the offi-clal view, to the extent that Foreign Minister Paul Ros could go before the UN General Assembly last week and accuse the administration of "filthy policies of economic hlockade."

• Influential Cuban exiles and numerous conservative legislators, including at least 34 senators. who would oppose an early rapprochement between the United States and Cuba, · Remaining conservative governments in Latin America that would be frightened by U.S. acceptance of Castro Communismchiefly Brazil, Paraguay, Chile, Bolivia and Ecuador.

 The administration perception that to take up ties now with the Castro government would be to strengthen the impression that President Nixon and Mr. Kissinger prefer dealing with enemies to dealing with friends, and also an impression that the way to get something out of the United States is to pull Uncle Sam's beard.

For the present, administration officials see neither great gain nor great loss in seeking better relations with the Castro leadership, and sime think nothing substantive could take place until Mr. Nixon's successor is in office.

In the administration view, the rapprochement would require the mediation of a country that has close ties with both Cuba and the United States. At the moment, only Mexico, Peru and Algeria qualify for that role. Also, the Castro government is reported to he willing to meet constructively" with the hemisphere foreign ministers as a participant in "the new hemi-sphere dialogue" in Buenos Aires next March. This could pave the way for a direct Havana-Wash-ington dialogue, say U.S. officials, although they are not eothusiastic at this time about Cuban participation at Buenos Aires,

Soviet Role

One part of the puzzle that still does not fit the considerations of the administration officials is the role played by the Soviet Union, which is extending $500 million in assistance to Cuba annually, according to the estimates here. Some officials believe the Soviet Union enjoys the spectacle of the United States being discredited in its renewed efforts to cultivate its southern hemisphere neighbors

French Election Viewed

The End of Gaullism

By C. L. Sulzberger

DARIS.—It is not yet clear who won the French elections begun May 5 and scheduled to end on May 19 but it is obvious who lost them. That man was the late Charles de Gaulle. If nothing else the quest for a new president touched off by Georges Pompidou's death proved that Gaullism could not long endure without its namesake and in-

The general himself often confided to callers, with a mixture of pride and regret, that he had no successors. Surely Pompidou, an able lieutenant with much political wisdom, never pretended that he was more than a man who occupied the Elysée seat that had heen filled by his great pre-

Pompidou emphasized both continuity and change from the original tenets of Gaullism. Jacques Chaban-Deimas, who sought to pursue a similar policy, was un-able to sell the idea to France's voters despite the fact that he had been a prime minister, was a Resistance hero, is a handsome man, a fine athlete and boss of a political stronghold at Bor-

Chaban Fails

Chaban (as he is known to the French) failed lamentably. This was partly due to his own shortcomings (he was touched by a tax scandal and is a poor speak-er) and partly due to the sordid rivalries of other Ganilista scrambling for power. But mostly it was due to the fact that Gaullism is dead. It couldn't survive De Gaulle. Gaullism was not a political philosophy. It was a vague mixture of national prida and a sense of grandeur which the general manipulated skillfully into a power apparatus and a policy method that aimed at increasing French influence and prestige.

It was never a reasoned, intellectual code like Marrism. It represented a mixture of the general's thoughts and the historic events in which he was personally acting a role or taking a lead. André Malraux, the famous writer and a member of De Gaulle's cabinet, thought that this in a sense resembled the situation of the French Revolution which, by its personalized past, haunted subsequent revolutions in 1848 and 1870.

France is and has been for several generations a democracy terms of its credo and also terms of its administrative structure, although during that time it has been headed by emperors, kings and presidents, and of whom seemed to conceive themselves in a quasi-money sense of function. An odd stew has been con-of financial stability, social in tice and traditional strains. The tend to rival each other in and vice versa.

Although many modern cor cepts of democracy were fig. defined by French philosophu and practised by French state men, democracy here has ten ed to lack a sense of civism an appreciation of what contribu tions can be made by the privat sector to the public weal

Likewise, Communism is prot ably somewhat different her from other European countrie The party is solid, well-organize and can count on impressive sur port at the ballot boxes. Bu although De Gaulle used to pit claim that Communism was a "army" that worked for a "for eign" power, most people votin Communist here are only it

Thus, as the 1974 election ap proaches its climax with tw standard-bearers-Valery Giscar d'Estaing for the right sod cen ter-right and François Mitterran for the left and center-left-Gaullism as an issue disappear Of course Giscard-never a: orthodox Gaullist-will do every thing possible to depict the disasters that face France should Mitterrand's Socialist - Communist coclition win. This will have strong appea among conservatives, practising Catholics and those who still announce themselves as "Gaullists." But for the first election in I' years, neither De Gaulle no Gaullism is the key issue. New men and policles that at less appear new will now govern France as the memory of the grand old general fades into the history books.

U.S. Inflation

DJ-AP article (IHT, April 26). Paviova fits into a recognizable Vol. 7 of the standard Russia The news services must surely psychological pattern. have set out to bamboozle readers with their report, for it is the same experts who have been managing the economy all these years who have brought on the current inflation. It would be naive to expect them to admit now that they have been on the wrong track all along.

Rather than ask the discredited experts, DJ-AP would have done better to look into Webster's dictionary to find both the cause and cure of the thing. It says, "inflation. . . 2, an increase in the volume of money and credit relative to goods resulting in a substantial and continuing rise in the general price level."

Only government can increase the volume of money; and its hanking system the volume of credit. Cut government spending and credit expansion, and inflation is bound to stop.

The United States has had 40 years of drunken-sailor spending. And to hope for a sudden return to austerity in 1974 is to hope for a miracle. Better to cite the confusion of experts so as to keep the public equally confused and attention averted from the real cause of its troubles, J.M. BRADLEY.

Kennedy in Moscow

One might have contemplated voting for Sen Edward Kennedy as the Democratic presidential candidate in 1976. But how can one do so in light of his utter insensitivity to the risks of the Jewish activists following his visit to Dr. Lerner's apartment in Moscow (IHT, April 26), when he thought only to "minimize the offense to his Soviet hosts"?

Not satisfied with 'being escorted by a KGB man," the senator had him "sit in on the meeting," And he expected his Jewish hosts whose exit visas were already denied, to express them openly and meaningfully "in the supposedly totalitarian society.*

This conduct brands him as little less than a callous egotist and a self-centered opportunist. SERGE G. JACOBSON

East-West Semantics

Alexander Solzhenitsyn's dispute with the Western (especially American) press over his "na-tionalism" (IHT, April 2) is based on a different understanding of this word in the West and East. Whereas the Webster unabridged ed. (1961) defines it as: "3. Devotion to, or advocacy of, national interest or national unity and independence; as, the nationalism of Ireland or China. 4. Zealous adherence to one's own nation or to its principles; patriotism," the Russian "Dictionary of Words of Foreign Origin" (Moscow, 1954) furnishes the following definition; "Reactionary bourgeois ideology and policy aimed at fanning national hostility and instigating one nation against another in the interests of the exploiting classes [...] The ideology of bourgeois nationalis is widely used by international Sabena announces a relaxing new way to reach the Far East: the Douglas DC10.

Horses for courses

Next time you fly Sabena to the Far East or to Africa, it's possible you'll find yourself aboard a Douglas DC-10-30 CF. The DC-10 is one of the new generation of wide-bodied superjets which Sabena is bringing into service in 1974. Objective, to make your journey easier and more comfortable. Each of these new jets has been selected with a particular type of operation in mind 🧃 The DC-10 was picked for long range flights. Another type of aircraft has been chosen for short haul operations. And yet another for the trans-

The wide-bodied principle.

Sabena's new DC-10's were ouilt by McDonnell Douglas on the new wide-bodied principle. The cabin is almost 19 feet wide with 8 feet of headroom, You can really spread out in your seat. And you'll never bang your head - unless you're a Harlem Globetrotter. Even the passenger windows give you a 30% bigger view than on ordinary planes. While your hand baggage slips neatly out of the way into a personal overhead locker.

Smooth, silent prover from

The Sabena DC-10's have a new kind of engine known as a 'high by pass turbofan" built by General Electric. Apart from being much more powerful. these engines - along with superior new sound proofing mean that you can converse quietly anywhere in the cobin.

Easy come easy go. In Sabena's new DC-10's the fuselage is divided into separate rooms; with special wardrobes for coats and new. superbly comfortable seats designed to stay comfortable for hours on end. Each room has its own lavatories. There are even electric razor points in the cabin - so a toiler is never engaged while somebody shaves. And each room has two passenger aisles. So you're never farther than one seat from an aisle and Sabena's cabin service is even quicker.

New fresh air system.

Every passenger seat is assured of a supply of clean fresh air by a revolutionary new air conditioning system which changes the air in the cabin completely every three minutes.

The good neighbour

The DC-10's turbofan engines are designed for more efficient combustion, reducing pollution through soot or unborned fuel to a minimum. So even if you don't fly, you'll appreciate the DC-10,

Tradition

This may be exaggerated, but the tradition of emigration from this region to the United States has been strong since the end of the last century. Although the emigrants don't have restourant experience-Gourin is not noted for its cuisine-the strong concentration of Gourin people in that field draws them into the network on arrival.

About 6,000 of those from Gourin are estimated to have emigrated to North America. This is a somewhat larger number than the present population of the town.

A strong flow back to France occurred during the Depression

One who returned then was Jean Fichen from the neighboring village of Roudouallec. Now he has the distinction of running the Air France agency in the smallest locality in France to have a branch office. Prices Soften on Big Board After Early Technical Gain

NEW YORK, May 7 (Reuters). After sliding for nearly a week, New York Stock Exchange prices moved along a recovery path most of today but then seftened and turned mixed.

Apart from bargain hunting and other technical factors, there seemed to be no reason for the market's initial strength.

Analysis attributed part of the jate weakness to comments that interest rates likely will continue to advance over the near term, Donald Wooley, vice-president of Bankers Trust Co., said in London that the prime rate could move to 11 1 2 percent next mouth, but would peak out around that level. The controversy surrounding President filson and Watergate also kept traders on the defensive, analysts observed. The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 847,15, up 2.27 points. It was ahead about 7 points in early trading. Declining issues narrowly ied gamers, 704 to 653, at the close. Issues advancing beld a moderate early lead.

Trading was slow throughout the session. Volume tolated 10.71 million shares, compared with 9.45 million yesterday. Combustion Engloeering did not open for trading, although the exchange at one point had indi-cated it would trade anywhere from 50 to 65. It last traded 26 75 1 8. This followed a published re-

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Schering First-Quarter Turnover Up

First-quarter 1974 turnover of the West Berlinbased Schering drug and chemical group ran 20 percent ahead of the year-earlier level, reports Karl Otto Mittelstenscheld, management board member. Sales of Schering AG, the parent company, rose 23.6 percent. In all 1973, Schering worldwide net profit sank 36.4 percent to 41.1 million deutsche marks, despite a 10.7 percent gain in sales to 1.491 hillion DM. Profit figures are not yet available and Mr. Mittelstenscheid declines to forecast earnings for the full year because of un-predictable cost factors. Parent-company raw material costs in the first quarter were up 30 percent from year-earlier levels and the decisive questions for 1974 profit, he says, are whether cost increases of recent months will continue and to what extent these can be passed on in the form of higher prices. He attributes the decline in worldwide profit to poor results of some domestic units and to a change in currency values that reduced foreign subsidiaries' earnings as expressed in deutsche marks.

FW Considers More Short-Time

Volkswagenwerk is considering placing some of its domestic plants on short-time working for the six working days May 24-31 because of falling sales. A company spokesman says the extent of probable measures has not yet been decided. Tha measures are likely to be concentrated at the company's Emden and Hannover plants, which together employ about 34,000 workers. Five of the company's six West German plants ended a nine-day short-time period last Friday which affected 45,000 out of the total labor force of 125,000. Chief executive Rudolf Leiding said last month that VW would operate at a loss this year because of rising costs and folling sales.

Joint Project to Explore Sea-Bottom Three Japanese trading houses have signed an agreement with Tenneco of the United Slates on $20-million project to develop and evaluate a Pacific Ocean site for recovery of sea-bottom metals. The group includes Nichemen Co., C. Itoh & Co. and Kanematsu-Gosho Ltd. They are to take a third of the proposed joint venture's equity between them. The new company would be open to third parties' participation from West European countries as well as the United States and Japan. Tenneco's ocean mining subsidiary. Deepsea Ventures Inc., will assess the one body, test the mining and processing system and market products recovered. The joint venture is aimed at producing copper, nickel, cobalt and manganese from manganese nodules on the ocean floor.

National Kinney Bids for Uris

National Kinney Corp. has begun a tender offer for all the shares of its 56 nercent-owned subsid-iary Uris Building Corp. at $15 a share. Tenders will also be solicited for Uris warrants at $19.327 each. National Kinney purchased 54 percent of Uris common stock last July at an adjusted price of obout $11.67 a share and agreed to complete a merger between the two companies or to make a tender offer not later than June 30, 1974. The current offer expires May 29, unless extended. The cost of huying the 3,554.961 Uris shares outstanding will be about $60 million.

Clear progress in production, sales and earnings characterized the fiscal year 1972/73: 13.9 million tons of crude steel, 11.9 billion DM external sales. After two difficult prior years, a consolidated profit of 101.6 million DM could be realized after appropriating 67.3 million DM to the free reserves. The annual shareholders' meeting resolved on April 19, 1974 to distribute a dividend of 5 DM per share of 50 DM par value.

The international demand for steel presently continues to be brisk despite a slowdown in the overall economic growth at home and abroad. The steel sector of the Thyssen Group shows therefore a favourable development also in the current fiscal year.

The takeover of Rheinstahl has been carried cut. With a strong partner, this new member of the Group will be in a position to implement further structural improvements. At the same time, the Thyssen Group has now a broader basis on which to operate. A close technological-economic cooperation of the specialized divisions has been initiated.

The foreign activities in Europe and overseas are taking shape. The first construction stage of our Brazilian participation COSIGUA has been completed. The steelmaking plant SOLMER on the French coast has gone into production.

of a Year fraught with Difficulties ...International Operations particularly Fruitful

The Commerciank Group is one of the biggest banking concerns in West Germany with more than 825 branches covering the Country, and some 18.000 staff serving around 2.4 million customers holding approximately 3.6 million accounts.

The consolidated balance skeet total increased during 1973 by 11%:

DM millions Capital and Reserves 30,920 Deposits Total Assets 39,098

Commerzbank's development during 1973 was adversely aftected by the extremely tough anti-inflationary measures taken by both the German Federal Government and the Bundesbank. Nonetheless, 1973 saw the further steady realisation on all fronts of Commerzbank's international expansion.

International Activities
Among the milestones for 1973
were the establishment of the London hranch, and the foundation in Amsterdam of the Europartners Bank (Nederland) N.V. Additional rep-(Nederland) N.V. Aduntional representative offices were opened in Lima and, at the beginning of 1974, in Teneral Commerciank well equipped for Teneral

All in all, Commerzbank's international activities in 1973 contributed about one quarter of total earnings. In addition to foreign branch offices in New York - where Commerchank has completed another successful year of business - and London, the progress of the Bank's Luxembourg subsidiary Commerzbank International S.A. was also very gratifying.

The Europartners Group linking Commerzbank with Banco di Roma and Crédit Lyonnais, has been broadened to include Banco Hispano Americano. The neart of this European-wide network is the "TransCredit" system serving the interests of customers of member banks.

A Word on Shareholding

Commerzbank numbers more than 100,000 suareholders drawn from ell walks of life. More than two thirds of the staff hold, at the same time, shares in the Bank. Foreign shareholders are also welcome: The more investment activities spread abroad, the more natural it seems to promote an international spread of share ownership. Commerzbank's shares are now regularly traded on no less than eleven foreign exchanges, providing support in good measure for the contention that Commerzbank is really international. Following London (1962), Paris (1971) and Vienna (1972), the Bank's shares were introduced during 1973 in Brussels, Antwerp, Zürich, Geneva, Basle, Berne and Lausanne and, early in 1974, in Luxem-bourg. In every instance Commerz-bank was the first German bank to receive a quotation.

Well Equipped Administratively and further expansion. To assure maximum manoeuvreability in the months ahead the AGM again provided an approved capital increase of DM I/O million, adequate to back even a surprise upturn in credit demand. The AGM, held in Frankfurt on

3rd May 1974, also approved an unchanged dividend of DM 8.50 per nominal DM 50 .- share, payable out of the year's net profit of DM 79.6

Lichtenberg views Fature with growing

Reviewing the economic situation Paul Lichtenberg. Board spokesman, underlined his growing confidence in Germany's ability to keep inflation under the critical 10% level, and to control the problem of prices more successfully than most other indus-trialized countries. However, the maintenance of both full employment and deflationary policies is made more difficult by the extreme and unprecedented imbalance in the German economy between foreign and domestic demand. The capital market continues to give ground for market continues to give ground for concern, although the strength of the D-Mark and relatively stable economic conditions soould once again eocourage foreign investment in German

The Bank's Role in Modern Society Both management and staff of Commerchank are aware that success. far from being merely a question of financial gain, is largely a marter of partnership over generations with trust as the common denominator.

Against the standard generalization that "Money is Power" Commerz-bank represents the standpoint "Trust is Power". Only trust between the staff and their customers can ensure that Commerciank remains really integrated in the economic system. Trust, however, can be withdrawn at any time - here lies the guarantee against any misuse of power

PABLO CASALS

A Biography

By H. L. Kirk. Illustrated. Holt Rinehart & Winston 693 pp. $15.

Reviewed by Donal Henahan

APPLAUSE is the mo. potent of rejuvenators, the most certain remedy for tired blood, the one true aphrodisiac. The human organism needs it the way a plant needs water and light and will have it even if it must be dr wn from the organism itself. Ponce de Leon was on the wrong track all along; he should have gone on the concert stage, preferably as a con-ductor, that longest-lived and most applauded of all cultural phenomena. So let there be no more speculation about how Pahlo Casals could have lived to be 97 years old with so little diminution of his zest, musical powers and reputation. Possibly no artist of his time heard so much applause from so many levels of society for so many different reasons. He was, of course, preeminently a musical hero who discovered his own technique for playing the cello at an early age and revolutionized his craft. He was a lifelong conductor as well, and a composer of heartfelt though mediocre works.

But Casals was a culture hero whose applause came from everwidening circles of society. He came to stand for something especially valuable to the liberal left, which idolized him because he never made peace with Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Spain, no matter who else did or why. He was an indispensable symbol: While he stood firm, the old battles could be considered as not lost but merely bypassed while democratic governments pursued greater goals such as cold wars and police actions.

Casals, however, survived being a symbol far more successfully than most heroes do. As H.L. Kirk's authorized biography suggests, the legend is not only intact but growing. Unless there is a revisionist biographer waiting in the wings right now, preparing to tell about the real Pablo Casals, the man and the myth are likely to continue merging into one monumental chunk of history, Mr. Kirk, who did not meet Casals until the great man was 84 years old, has had to trust his subject's memory for many events and ancodotes, which is understandable. (But is it necessary to record, without hint of doubt, little Pablo's remembrances of lying in bed listening to the surf at the age of less than one year?) .

Faced with the double-barreled danger inherent in such a project, of too much skepticism or too much plety, Mr. Kirk skews toward piety. But rarely has piety. tempted a biographer so strongly, or seemed at least so nearly valid an approach. This, after all, was a man bigger than (though he stood just 5 feet inches in his shoes).

If Mr. Kirk's biography at little entirely new to earl hagiographic studies by J.M. Co redor, Bernard Taper and Albe E. Kahn, it fleshes out the legen with much fascinating deta enough of it musical to remit one that this is, after all, to story of a musical life. The he history of Casals's marriage and romances is treated tag fully, 'ut clearly. It now seen he did not actually man Guilhermina Suggia, the fine woman cellist of her day, but i did marry three others: Sun Metcalle, Frasquitz Capleyi and his final love, Marta Mor

The anecdotes flow freely fro start to finish, of course, an even the veteran Casals idolate is likely to come across ne ones here. Somehow this review has never heard of Casals's rep when he was asked how we Queen Elisabeth of the Belgian piayed the violin: "She plays it a queen."

The Casals legend will suffe none at the hands of Mr. Kir but should it? He was a genuine great artist, a genuinely gre man, and if we must have myt and symbols, let them be but of such solid stuff. Is it th worst of human sins to im mortalize a man who coul honestly say, "What I most eno is standing up for something." Mr. Henahan is a New York Times music critic.

Rest showed himself a resourceplausible if he held two he ful defender on the diagramed deal, taking full advantage of some unsound bidding. South had done full justice to his hand when he jumped to three spades on the second round, and the dismond suit was a weakness. He should therefore have signed off in four spades when his partner hinted at a slam by bidding four clubs,

The use of the Blackwood convention is always unwise when there is a danger of two quick losers in an unbid suit. South did not know this, and landed himself in five spaces high enough for danger, but not high enough for profit.

The defense would have taken three tricks quickly if West had led the diamond ace, as he no. doubt should have done. But he led the heart ten, leaving his partner with a problem after winning the first trick with the heart ace.

South's sign-off following Blackwood strongly suggested that he was missing two aces. East made the reasonable assumption, not guaranteed, however, that his pariner held the diamond ace and that the defense could take at least one diamond trick But if the contract was to be beaten, a third trick was needed, which could be a second diamond trick or a heart ruff.

Allin emerged from a stretch duel with a final-round 3-underpar 68 over the soggy Preston Trail Golf Club course and a tournament record 72-hole score of 269, 15 under par.

That was good enough for a four-stroke victory over Homero Blancas, Lee Trevino, Charles "oody and Tom Watson, With the victory Allin became the secood golfer oo the tour this season to surpass $100,000 in winnings. It was the fourth tour victory in less than four years on the circuit for Allin, the Vletnam veteran who was decorated for bravery as an artillery officer. The 269 fired by Allin cracked the tournament record of 270 set by Miller Barber in 1968. Last week Allin came to the final hole of the Tournament of Champions deadlocked for the lead but a poor second shot that caught a hunker cost him an opportunity for the victory that eventually went to leading money winner Johnny Miller.

A French Proposal

LONDON, May 7 (UPI).-A Davis Cup official said today something had to be done about the Davis Cup format, but be didn't think a French proposal would do the job.

"The outlook for the Davis Cup is not a very happy one," said Besil Reay, the Davis Cup secretary. "Some solution must he found, but I do not think this Reay was speaking of a French proposal to reshape the Davis Cup into a 24-nation competition played in one spot over a twoweek period.

The French will officially put forward the proposal July 4 at the annual meeting of Davis Cup Notions in London. Reay said something had to be done to avoid Davis Cup con-flicts with professional tennis tournaments, but "it would be very difficult to find centers large enough or capable of coping with 24 countries playing for two weeks." The French proposal says that sixteen teams would compete by invitation, and cight would be seeded. The remaining eight would qualify from a preliminary tournament, staged in zone play such as at present. The French did not suggest a date for such a tournament. It would have to be fitted into the crowded calendar to avoid such events as Wimhledon and Forest Hills, Lamar Hunt's World Championship Tennis circuit and the new American World Team Tennis (WTT: league.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 7 NYT .-- A 15-point lead with less than eight minutes to play wasn't enough for victory last night, and a three-point deficit in the final second wasn't enough for defeat for the New York Nots. who went on to a 103-100 overtime victory over the Utah Stars.

That yo-yo-like performance gave them a 3-0 lead in the fourof-seven-game series for the American Basketball Association championship, and gave them the opportunity to end the season by winning again here tomorrow. In the seven-year history of the ABA, no team has ever swept a final round in four straight, and in the 28 years of National Baskethall Association play, it has happened only twice.

A three-point basket by Brian with 8 seconds left, and this time taylor, from just outside the 25foot arc, saved the Nets last

Cougars Advance To WHA Final

TORONTO, May 7 (UPI).-Four second-period goals powered Chicago to a 5-2 victory over Torento last night and gave the Cougars their World Hockey Association semi-final playoff over the Toros, four games to three.

The Cougars, fourth-place finishers in the WHA East, had beaten the first-place New England Whalers in the quarterfinals after trailing in that series, 3-2, and eliminated the second-place Toros in similar fashion

Chicago now faces the Houston Aeroes, firsi-place finishers in the West. Dates for the matches have not yet been decided because neither team's arena 15 currently available.

The Cougars played in the Chicago Amphitheatre during the regular season but were evicted for the semi-final scries because of the Peter Pan show. They wound up playing in the tiny. Randhurst Arena in Mt. Prospect, Ill, but league officers have ruled that the Randhurst Arena, with a seating capacity of 2.800, was too small to hold a champiooship series.

We can only guess what vari-ous men would omit. Would Enrlichman, for example, elect to write in "(unintelligible)" when transcribing the passage in which he calls John Mitchell "the big enchilada" who, if thrown to the volves, might satisfy appetitie? for a large-size victim and take the pressure off the White House? And what about Dean? There is that passage in which the President tells him to compile a list of people they can "get," people who "have been asking for it" and who are now "going to get it," since the President has finally decided to use his power against them. "What an exciting prospect!" is Dean's reply. Surely. Dean would like to edit that embarrassing piece of boyish sycophancy down to an "(unintel-

Crying Wolf to a 'Deaf' Correspondent

By Waverley Root

PARIS, May 7 (IHT).—Thirty-four years ago (May 9-10, 1940) the least perceptive journalist in France, or possibly in the world, was a Mutual Broadcasting System correspondent named Wayerley Root. My broadcasts had been cut down to one a week and even at that I sometimes had trouble scraping up enough news to make a good story, for the phoney war had been going on for several months, unbroken by any interesting activity except, a month earlier, the invasion of Denmark and Norway.

This was off my beat, but it struck home: it shot out from under me overnight what had become my principal job-I had been for eight years the Paris correspondent of the Copenhagen Politiken. then the largest paper in Scandinavia. The silver lining of this dark cloud was that I now seemed to have time, between weekly broadcasts, to head south and spend a few days with my wife and daughter, whom I had bundled out of Paris B few days before war was declared and who were living in Cannes.

Unfortunately, when I arrived at the Ministry of Posts each week for my broadcast. I invariably found it humming with rumors about the troops of one country or another massing on its borders. and a prospect that all hell would break out on the morrow. Each week I canceled my plans to leave Paris. On the night of May 9, the grapevine was that the Dutch Army had mobilized along the frontier with Germany, but I had been had too often to bite this time, short of personal assurances from Queen Wilhelmina. My broadcast finished, I climbed into my II-hp Citroën and headed south via the Place de la Concorde. which I had to cross to reach my apartment and pick up my typewriter and luggage, which included a comely young woman named Gertrude, whom I was taking along for company.

A policeman flagged me down at the entrance to the Place and I reached for my papers, an automatic gesture in those days. He waved them aside. "Be careful going through the Place de la Concorde," he said, "It's full of garbage trucks." "What in the world for?" I asked. "To keep planes from landing on it," he said. This should have been a signal to cancel my plans once more, but I ignored it, I had harkeoed to the cry of wolf too often, I slalomed through the garbage trucks, which were scattered haphazardly all over the square, picked up Gertrude and the other impedimenta, and we were off.

It was a little before 4 a.m. My idea had been to make Cannes nonstop, but fatigue caught up with me at Vienne, so we stopped at a hotel on the main square and succeeded in wringing two rooms from a reluctant hotel clerk who saw no reason why a pair of normally constituted young people would want more than one

We were not destined to get much sleep. I was awakened by distant booming and went to the window to see what was happening. A fire engine was standing in the equare across from the hotel. A small group of people beside it were staring towards Lyons. The booms in the distance meant nothing to mc. for I had never heard bombs drop before.

Only later did I learn that I had been within hearing distance of the first German bombing of France outside of the zone of military operations proper—that of the Bron airdrome at Lyons. Although I still lacked word from Queen Wilhelmins, I had now been given a rather sharp hint that something was up, but proved incapable of translating it. The night before, to kill time while waiting for the hour of my broadcast. I had been playing chess in the Café de Flore with Tristan Tzara, the founder of dada. He had spoken feelingly to me of a restaurant called La Mère Germaine at Châteauneufdu-Pape. La Mère Germaine, a real person, not a trademark, covered our whole table with a colorful collection of hors d'œuvre, each more mouth-watering than the other, and I must have turned on like a light; for mooths Paris restaurants had been obeying the wartime restrictions that limited the number of appetizers in hors spring. The sun was bright, the day warm, and in the distance, its outlines shimmering in a heat haze, the solid tower of the Palace of the Popes rose from its rock in Avignon, Replete with the peace of good food and drink (it was then that I learned for the first time that white Chateauneuf-du-Pape exists), I exclaimed, "It's not possible that this country is at war!" We then drove into Avignon, where a newsboy thrust into the car a paper whose black headline shouted: "GERMANS INVADE NORTHERN FRANCE, HOLLAND, BELGIUM."

I was now in blood stepped in so far that . . returning were as tedious as go o'er," or, more prosaically, too far from my baso to head back for the Ministry of Posts in Paris, there was a nearer microphone at Aix-en-Provence. I do not know the fastest speed the pre-war Citroen 11 could make, but we went faster. At one moment, roaring down a hill on one of those narrow blackton national roads which sank so unobtrusively into the Provencel countryside, since replaced by hideous broad cement highways designed to propei you through the once levely landscape too fast to see it (just as well, since these evesore arteries have destroyed its beauty anyway), the two halves of the hood, torn loose by the rushing wind, rose flapping into the air like the wings of some monstrous black bird, cutting off my vision. As she felt the car slowing to a stop, Gertrude opened her eyes. I secured the hood and took off chain; she quickly shut them once more and kept them shut until I had to slow down to

It was far too early for me to broadcast from Aix, so I telephoned from the radio station there to the ministry in Paris and asked that Nice be instructed to ready a microphone for me for a 3:15 a.m. broadcast. I also filed a cable to MBS in New York to warn them to listen for it. We took off again, not culte so fast this time, for there was now less hurry.

It was after dark when we reached the famous Esterel road which snakes its way through the forests of the Mounts of the Moors. I had driven the Esterel before, but not in a hlackout with no light except that which pierced the six pinholes drilled through the black tin cups which covered the headlights, giving just enough illumination to show how dark it was. A thick fog now joined us I remembered that there was a precipitous drop on one side of tha road, so I hugged the other, as closely as I could tell where it was in the murk, thoughtlessly explaining why to Gertrude, who promptly closed her eyes again.

At 2:30 a.u. I was sitting before the mike in Nice, calling New York and getting no answer. I persevered for something like two hours, during which time nobody proved able to hear me, though at one moment I picked up Mutual's correspondent at the front talking to Mutual. I was happy to know that someone was getting through, but it was frustrating to be helplessly gagged. I again cabled New York announcing a broadcast for the following night, and the same process was repeated. I didn't dare leave my mike, dumb though it was, to start back for Paris, for fear of being caught flatfooted far off base again, so I spent five days in this futile

On the sixth, a brace of security police officers called on me at my wife's villa. Throwing my cables to New York accusingly down before me, they demanded, "Monsieur, how do you explain this?" explained: "BROADCASTING 120315 47325" meant that I would be on the air May 12 at 3:15 a.m., using a wavelength of 473.25 meters (any radio buffs who find this last figure strange are hereby informed that I have concocted it at random, having forgotten wavelengths completely). The officers were clearly disappointed. They had flaired cipher and expected to uncover a spy, an excellent means of securing The immediate crisis had passed, and I now dared to take tha time to drive back to Paris. We covered the Esterel in daylight and I discovered with a certain feeling of shock that I had remembered its drops on the wrong side of the road; I must have been speeding over it a good deal of the time with the outer half of my offside tires resting on nothing. I did not mention this to Gertrude.

PEOPLE: And Italy's Referendan

The poster, pasted up all over from British Independent Rome, shows a young couple in correspondents who have peasant clothes and says that bombarding Snowdon with farmers will vote for repeal of tions. Italy's divorce law in the national referendum Sunday. But the couple in the picture, Sergio Panerazi and Santina Silvetti, have asked the courts to take the posters down. Because:

- They never authorized the use of the picture in the poster.
- · They are not married. In Gen. Clark's command has fact, sinca the picture was taken, they married different persons.
- · They are not farmers.
- · They plan to vote in favor of divorce.

It has been 109 years since Dr. Samuel Madd was convicted of conspiracy for having treated John Wilkes Booth's hroken leg, suffered when Booth leapt from the presidential box of Ford's Theater after assassinating Abra-ham Lincoln, But Mudd's grandson, Dr. Richard Mudd of Saginaw Mich. is still pursuing a campaign to get his ancestor's conviction overturned. Convinced that Mudd was apparently unaware of the shooting of Lincoln at the time he treated Booth, the Florida legislature has approved a resolution asking that Samuel Mudd, who was tried by a military tribunal, he declared innocent. A similar resolution had been passed earlier by tha Maryland legislature. The Mudd resolution was sponsored in tha Florida House by State Rep. Richard Hodes, himself a physician, who said, "I believa this is clearly a case of a man and his descendants being hurt by judicial misconduct."
